Synergis Software Releases Enhanced Adept Engineering Document Management and Workflow Solution

New version focused on ease of administration, security, and Windows 7 support

Quakertown, PA, February 25, 2010—Synergis Software, developer of Adept engineering document management and workflow solutions, today announced the release of Adept 8.2, a major update that includes support for Windows 7 32-bit and 64-bit, deeper integration with Active Directory, SSL-encrypted data transfer, and other customer requested features.

"Adept 8.2 is focused on technologies that help our clients be more productive and achieve their business goals," said Todd Cummings, vice president of research & development, Synergis Software. "Adept's seamless integration with Active Directory allows our customers to maintain a single source of user and group accounts, while ensuring the two systems stay synchronized. This enhancement eliminates redundant data entry, improves the efficiency of Adept administration, and lowers the total cost of Adept ownership."

Another highly requested feature added to Adept 8.2 is support for SSL-encrypted data transfers to and from Adept vaults – both inside and outside the firewall. "Adept uses the same level of encryption as online banking and online commerce sites," added Cummings. "This added security option improves on an already unique strength of the Adept solution, the vaulting methodology itself. Adept vaults provide the security you need without scrambling document and folder names."

"For many years our clients have been telling us this is a critical factor in their decision to select Adept", said Cummings. "No one wants to implement a solution that holds their mission critical engineering data hostage".
